PREFACE.

I.

Alex. Csoma de Körös, the pioneer student of Tibetan, in the preface of his Tibetan-English-Dictionary, published in 1834, wrote as follows:—

"When there shall be more interest taken for Buddhism (which has much in common with the spirit of true Christianity) and for diffusing Christian and European knowledge throughout the most eastern parts of Asia, the Tibetan Dictionary may be much improved, enlarged, and illustrated by the addition of Sanskrit terms."

The result of his investigations, to speak in Csoma's own words, was that the literature of Tibet is entirely of Indian origin. The immense volumes on different branches of science, etc., being exact or faithful translations from Sanskrit works, taken from Bengal, Magadha, Gangetic or Central India, Kashmir, and Nepal, commencing from the seventh century after Christ. And that many of these works have been translated (mostly from Tibetan) into the Mongol, Manchu, and the Chinese languages; so that by this means the Tibetan language became in Chinese Tartary the language of the learned as the Latin in Europe. In the year 1889 I brought these opinions of that original investigator to the notice of Sir Alfred Croft, K.C.I.E., the then Director of Public Instruction in Bengal, and explained to him the necessity of compiling a Tibetan-English Dictionary on the lines indicated by Csoma de Körös for the use of Tibetan students and particularly to assist European scholars in the thorough exploration of the vast literature of Tibet, which, besides indigenous works, comprises almost all the Buddhist religious works of India, including the great collections of the Kahgyur and the Tangyur. Shortly before this Sir Alfred Croft had received a communication from the late Right Hon'ble Professor F. Max Müller on the desirability of translating into English a Sanskrit-Tibetan work on Buddhist terminology, which was looked for with interest, because it was expected to throw light on many obscure points of Buddhist-Sanskrit literature. The philosophical terms of that literature, many of which were of extremely doubtful meaning, had been translated with literal accuracy into Tibetan in early times, and it was anticipated that an analysis of the meaning of these terms would elucidate that of the original Sanskrit words, of which they were the equivalent renderings. Being impressed with the importance of the proposed work, Sir Alfred Croft, in a memorandum addressed to Government, wrote as follows:—

"Babu Sarat Chandra Das has brought with him four dictionaries of the classical Tibetan; one of these being a well-known Tibetan-Sanskrit Dictionary, compiled from a large number of named Tibetan as well as standard Sanskrit works, and dating from the 13th century A.D., and another being a Sanskrit-Tibetan Dictionary, which explains the Tantrik portion of the Buddhist Scriptures. The external arrangement of the dictionary will be as follows:—The Tibetan words will be placed first in alphabetical order; next their accepted Sanskrit equivalents; next the English rendering of the Tibetan terms; then will follow what is to be a special and valuable feature of the new dictionary. The meaning of each technical term is to be illustrated by extracts, with exact references from Sanskrit-Buddhist and Tibetan works. Further, it is proposed that Babu Sarat Chandra Das should include in the dictionary words of modern Tibetan which were not known to Csoma or Jäschke. The materials which he has amassed during his two journeys to and residence in Tibet give him exceptional facilities for making the work complete."

These recommendations having received the sanction of Government in June 1889, I was placed on special duty in connection with the compilation of the proposed dictionary. In 1899, when the work of compilation was brought to a close, the Hon'ble Mr. C. W. Bolton, C.S.I., then Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal, entrusted the revision of the work to the Revd. Graham Sandberg and Revd. William Heyde, and deputed Professor Satis Chandra Acharya, M.A., who had made Buddhist Sanskrit and Pali works his special study, to co-operate with me. My respectful thanks are, therefore, due to Sir Alfred Croft for the keen interest he took in my Tibetan studies and for his kind help at the inception of the work, and to Mr. Bolton for securing the services of the two Tibetan scholars—the Revd. Graham Sandberg and Revd. William Heyde —for its successful completion. I also record my obligations to Sir John Edgar, K.C.I.E., formerly Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal; to Dr. Emil Schlagintweit of Bavaria, and to the Hon'ble W. W. Rockhill, Author of The Land of Lamas for encouragement, assistance, and advice during the prosecution of my researches. Great is the debt of gratitude which I owe to the Revd. G. Sandberg for various acts of kindness. Without his scholarly and efficient aid this work would hardly have assumed its present shape, as he has given a scientific finish to the work which it was not in my power to do.

II.

In studying the origin and growth of Tibetan literature and the landmarks in the history of that language, Jäschke, the compiler of the second Tibetan-English Dictionary (published in 1882), noticed only two periods of literary activity. Had that critical student of Tibetan been in possession of works of modern literature, which dates from the establishment of the Dalai Lama's sovereignty over whole Tibet in the beginning of the 18th century A.D., he would certainly have modified his remarks on the subject. Neither he nor Csoma de Körös had any means or opportunities of studying either the current literature of every-day business or the refined, idiomatic literature of Tibet itself, which is quite distinct from the Indian literature that was translated or imported into the language. They do not seem to have ever during the course of their study of Tibetan come across works on drama, fiction, correspondence, etc. It is, therefore, no wonder that the compiler of the later dictionary should assign only two periods to the history of the literature of Tibet, entirely ignoring the third, which is indeed not the least important of the three.

The first period, to describe it in the language of Jäschke, is the Period of Translations, which, however, might also be entitled the Classical Period, for the sanctity of the religious message conferred a corresponding reputation and tradition of excellence upon the form in which it was conveyed. This period begins in the second half of the seventh century A.D., when Thon-mi Sambhoṭa (the good Bhoṭa or Tibetan), the minister of King Srongtsan Gampo, returned to Tibet after studying the Sanskrit language under an eminent Brahman teacher of Magadha. "His invention of the Tibetan alphabet gave two-fold impulse: for several centuries the wisdom of India and the ingenuity of Tibet laboured in unison and with the greatest industry and enthusiasm at the work of translation. The tribute due to real genius must be accorded to these early pioneers of Tibetan grammar. They had to grapple with infinite wealth and refinement of Sanskrit; they had to save the independence of their own tongue, while they strove to subject it to the rule of scientific principles, and it is most remarkable how they managed to produce translations at once literal and faithful to the spirit of the original."

The Classical Period may be divided into three stages. The first or the earliest stage terminated with the downfall of the first historical monarchy, when King Langdarma fell by the hand of an assassin. The second stage commenced with the introduction of the system of chronology, called the Vrihaspati cycle of 60 years, in Tibet by an Indian Buddhist called Chandra Nath and Chilu Pandit of Tibet in 1025 A.D. This was the age of Milaraspa and Atisa, whose illustrious disciple, Brom-ton Gyalwai Jungné, laid the foundation of the first Buddhist Hierarchy in Tibet and established the great monastery of Rwaḍeng, with a library of Sanskrit works. Jäschke's second period evidently corresponds with this stage, when "Tibetan authors began to indulge in composition of their own" and wrote on historical and legendary subjects. The third stage began with the conquest of Tibet by the Tartar Conqueror, Chingis Khan, in 1205 A.D., when Pandit S'ākya S'ri of Kashmir had returned to Tibet after witnessing the plunder and destruction of the great Buddhist monasteries of Odantapuri and Vikrama S'īla in Magadha, and the conquest of Bengal and Behar by the Mahomedans under Baktyar Ghilji in 1203 A.D. In this last stage flourished the grand hierarchy of Sakya, which obtained supreme influence over Tibet and the country, which was then divided into 13 provinces, called Thikor Chusum, as a gift from the immediate successors of Chingis Khan. Among the most noted writers of the time were Sakya Pandit Kungah Gyal-tshan, Dogon Phag-pa, the spiritual tutor of Emperor Khubli Khan, and Shongton Lotsawa, who translated the Kāvyādarśa of Dandi and Kshemendra's Avadāna Kalpalatā in metrical Tibetan. With the opening of the 15th century Buton-Rinchen Düb introduced a new era in the literature of Tibet, and Buddhism received fresh impulse under the rule of the Phagmodu chiefs, when Tibetan scholars took largely to the study of Chinese literature under the auspices of the Ming Emperors of China. During this period, called the age of Dā-nying (old orthography), the great indigenous literature of Tibet arose. A host of learned Lotsāwas and scholars like Tsongkhapa, Buton, Gyalwa Ngapa, Lama Tārānātha, Desri Sangye Gyatsho, Sumpa Khampo, and others flourished. This was the age of the Gelug-pa, or the Yellow Cap School of Buddhism, founded by Tsongkhapa with Gahdan as its head-quarters.

The third period begins with the first quarter of the 18th century, when Chinese suzerainty over Tibet was fully established and the last of the Tartar kings of the dynasty of Gushi Khan was killed by a General of the Jungar Tartars—an incident which transferred the sovereignty of Tibet to the Dalai Lama, who was till then a mere hierarch of the Gelug-pa Church. It is within this period that Tibet has enjoyed unprecedented peace under the benign sway of the holy Bodhisattvas, and its language has become the lingua franca of Higher Asia.

REVISORS' PREFACE.

When in December 1899 the Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal handed over to us for revision the Tibetan Dictionary upon which Sarat Chandra Das had laboured for some dozen years, we found at our disposal a work embracing a mass of new and important collections on the language, the value of which was marred by two prominent characteristics—first, the material had been put together in somewhat heterogeneous fashion, hardly systematic enough for a dictionary; secondly, the vast amount of original matter had been throughout greatly interlarded with lengthy excerpts from Jäschke's Dictionary, not always separable from the new information, and this imparted a second-hand appearance to large portions of the work, which was, in reality, by no means deserved. Moreover, in this way, no attempt had been made to improve upon Jäschke's definitions of many of the commoner Buddhist philosophical terms or to incorporate the later results of European scholarship in these instances. On the other hand, one was very often gratified to find, in the case of the more difficult philosophical terminology, that the learned Bengali had gone to original and little-explored sources of native information, such as Tsongkhapa's Lam-rim Chhenmo, and, by extracts from the same, furnished valuable and novel particulars under those heads.

Accordingly, the task which the Revisors set themselves was directed mainly to counteracting the errors of judgment above indicated. Such a task proved one of a more laborious character than might be at first imagined; and the fact that the work of amendment and addition has taken them upwards of two years of incessant toil sufficiently evidences its difficulty.

First, has come the business of selection and excision. The religion and philosophy of Tibetan books are properly confined to the Bon cult and to Buddhism. There had been, however, a tendency here to draw in all manner of Hindu thought and mythology, because one or two works translated into Tibetan from the Sanskrit dealt with these matters. This tendency it seemed right to curb except in those instances, not at all infrequent, where the Vedic and Puranic Hinduism, in some measure, was bound up with, or bore upon, or explained, Buddhist belief or popular practice.

Excision has had to be meted out, further, in the case of unnecessary repetition of otherwise properly-introduced information. Secondly, our task has been one of substitution. Many articles have had to be freshly written, or at least re-compiled. In place of the innumerable excerpts from Jäschke, already referred to, we have had to examine and to treat de novo the grammar and general usage of a large number of the commoner nouns, adjectives, and verbs, notably the verbs. To illustrate these new articles, we have had to substitute for Jäschke's examples a large number of original quotations from Tibetan authors as well as a certain number of made-up sentences put together to exhibit various phrases of ordinary employment. In other articles, also, where Sarat Chandra Das had not thought it necessary to do more than repeat Csoma's or Jäschke's illustrative sentences, we have looked out fresh examples to replace them. Of still greater importance was it in the case of certain doctrinal terms and phrases of Buddhism to undertake re-definition and to connote and assimilate modern discussion and research on the subject. Among those terms may be noted such as རྐྱེན, rkyen; རྟེན་འབྲེལ, rten-hbrel; ལྟ་བ, lta-wa; རྡུལ, rdul; བླ་མ, bla-ma; གཡུང་དྲུང, gyuń-druń; དེ་བཞིན་གཤེགས་པ, de-bshin-gçegs-pa. But while referring to these substitutions and others of a like nature, we do not wish to assume too much. We would rather repeat that, in the matter of philosophical definitions also, we have been frequently surprised and instructed by the descriptions and explanations of recondite ideas and terms which Sarat Chandra Das has himself succeeded in collecting from various native authorities. Such information would have sufficed if he had not sometimes confused it by the sudden and inconsequent linking on of Jäschke's remarks without curtailment and without any connotation of them to that which he had himself just set out. Thirdly, in the way of direct addition to the original work, there have been certain moderate supplementary contributions. Jäschke had dealt very fully with the Western colloquial, and we have sought to introduce a number of the colloquial words and phrases belonging to the Central and Eastern speech. Other additions have been short paragraphs on the mythological pantheon of Tibet and Mongolia, together with an attempt to give exact information on zoological and geographical points.

It may be considered by some that there is a certain lack of reference to known authorities in support of many of the statements set forth in this work. However, it should be remembered that in dealing with a language so little explored as the Tibetan (or which, indeed, in one narrow groove—that of the Kahgyur translations from Sanskrit—has, in some sense, been over-explored), the difficulty is to find adequate authorities for the real and more current uses of words and phrases. The stilted verbiage of the Kahgyur is often mere Sanskrit idiom literally rendered into Tibetan, but it gives no idea of the elastic style to be found in the innumerable indigenous productions of native Tibetan writers. Sarat Chandra Das has held familiar intercourse with modern men of learning in Tibet itself—the professors at Tashi-lhunpo, Daipung, Samye, Mindolling, and other important monastic institutions. Much, therefore, has been gleaned by him which, though absolutely reliable, cannot be given on any stated authority, but must be accepted as information obtained at first hand and now presented for the first time. This frank acceptance should also be extended to much with which the Revisors have been able to supplement the Author's original work. Both of them have been located for lengthy periods where Tibetan is the language of the people of the place, and have been in constant communication with men from Lhasa and all parts of Tibet. Under such circumstances, "authorities" cannot of course be quoted.

In dealing with philosophical terms, and in general with the forms to be met with both in the old classical works and in modern treatises, it will certainly be found, however, that our examples are constantly supported by exact references. These have been taken from writings of all kinds. Hitherto European scholars seem to have thought of the literature of Tibet as one consisting wholly of Sanskritic translation and as limited to the contents of the Kahgyur and Tangyur. The Author and the Revisors have endeavoured, by widening the sources of their quotations, to show how extensive a field is covered by mediæval and modern Tibetan writers. Geography, history, biography, political government, accounts, astrology, are all represented. It may be remarked, for example, that the official biographies of the successive Dalai Lamas alone fill some 32 volumes. Nevertheless, although these scarce memoirs are included in Sarat Chandra Das's library, we are sorry to point out that none of his examples appear to have been taken therefrom.

Knowing, however, how scanty is the range of Tibetan works available to the majority of students, we have not failed to quote largely in our examples from the Kahgyur and Tangyur collections. We may note on this point that a suggestion has been forwarded to us that, in quoting from the former, special references should be given to Mons. Feer's Textes tirés du Kandjour. But we are afraid that the scope for quotation would be narrowed if our references to the Kahgyur were confined to Mons. Feer's very limited extracts published in lithograph form over 30 years ago. As to the Index du Kandjour, which was issued in the publications of the Musée Guimet 20 years back, it is evident to every Tibetan student that this Index was only a réchauffé of Csoma Korösi's much clearer and fuller analysis of the Kahgyur printed 68 years ago in the pages of the Asiatic Researches. We fear, indeed, that reliance on such works as these would rather expose us to charges of non-acquaintance with more recent results of European investigation in the present field. Although working in India, we may observe, however, that we have done our best to keep pace with what European Orientalists have written on our subject; but assistance has been mainly derived from the many memoirs compiled by Russian and German scholars, and we would specially recommend to notice the collections in this field made by Prince Ukhtomski and the very recent publications of Dr. Albert Grünwedel, Dr. A. Conrady, and Professor Huth. The analyses of the Tangyur, issued by Professor Huth during the last three or four years, are particularly noteworthy. To return, however, to the above-mentioned suggestion, we may say that not only would the scope be too restricted, but also there is no necessity, under present conditions, to refer to any mere collection of extracts. Nearly every capital city in Europe now has obtained possession of complete copies of the Kahgyur volumes, and in two or three libraries the 220 volumes of the Tangyur may be also consulted. In St. Petersburg are three full sets of the Kahgyur and two sets of the Tangyur; in Paris is a set of the Kahgyur; in one or other of the great German libraries both the Tibetan encyclopœdia may be seen; in England, while curiously enough the British Museum Library owns only a small drawer-ful of loose Tibetan book-leaves, the India Office Library can boast a perfect series of both Kahgyur and Tangyur; and, lastly, in the Vatican Propaganda Library is preserved Oratio della Penna's incomplete collection of Kahgyur volumes.

A word as to the Sanskrit equivalents following each Tibetan term. Sanskrit scholars will perhaps consider these equivalents rather unsystematically enumerated. They have, nevertheless, with regard to the majority of them, this particular value:—they were selected by native Indian scholars of mediæval and later days in collaboration with Tibetan lotsawas or translators, as the appropriate Sanskrit synonyms of the respective Tibetan words. They have been taken chiefly from one celebrated Sanskrit-Tibetan Dictionary, and supplemented by a well-known Calcutta pandit and professor, Satis Chandra Acharya Vidyabhusan, who has also considerable acquaintance with literary Tibetan. The same learned professor has also, in numerous instances, appended a literal English rendering of the Sanskrit terms. These renderings have been placed within square brackets with the initial S outside the brackets, and he alone is responsible for such translations.

The system of transliteration followed is that adopted finally at the Vienna Congress of Orientalists ; and this system is observed in the case of all Tibetan and Sanskrit words intended to be literally transliterated and printed in italics. However, when a Tibetan or Sanskrit proper name occurs in Roman characters, not as a transliteration, but in the English explanation of a word, or in any English sentence as an integral part of such explanation or sentence, the name is spelled according to the conventional English fashion and, in the case of Sanskrit terms or names, as in Sir Monier Williams's Dictionary.

A considerable number of Tibetan words at the head of paragraphs will be found in larger type. This indicates either that the word is the root of all related terms, or that it is the most common word of the series and thus ostensibly that from which the others have been derived. Two different arbitrary signs will be found prefixed to many words. The Author, it seems, has marked such words as he considers archaic or gone out of present use with a swastika (卐), and those words deemed by him to have been imported into Tibetan from the Sanskrit, whether directly or by derivation, he has distinguished by a double-headed dagger (‡).

In conclusion, the Revisors would point out that although they have been given, and have generally taken, the greatest freedom in correcting or rejecting the matter set forth in this work, and for that reason cannot justly shift responsibility for the accuracy or non-accuracy of that which is herein written, nevertheless they have generally not reversed the views and statements of the Author wherever these have seemed to them reasonable or fairly tenable, and to be the result of deliberately-formed opinion. They have felt, even when differing personally from the Author, that this Dictionary was Sarat Chandra Das's—not their own.

We must not omit to mention that, by the agency of the Chief Secretary to Government, certain brief comments on various portions of the Dictionary were received from Professor Bendall, and we have to thank him for his kind suggestions.

The thirty consonants:

The Dictionary order of the Tibetan letters, with their Indo-Romanic equivalents and their pronunciation exemplified by English words:

ཚ	tsh	,, (ts aspirated).	ཨ	a	,, far.
ཛ	ds	,, guards.
ཝ	w	,, waft, wave.

In all the above twenty nine letters the last letter ཨ is inherent, therefore the Tibetan Grammarians have included it as a basis both for vowels and consonants. The letter ཨ (h) called (ཨ་ཧཱ་) the little a is generally joined to the basic-vowel of a letter to make its pronunciation long. When it is subjoined to the letter ཨ the compound so formed becomes equivalent to the Sanskrit आ ā and is pronounced as a in tar, far, or father. When it is subjoined to the vowel ི the compound so formed resembles the Sanskrit ी and is pronounced like i in police and so on.

TIBETAN-ENGLISH DICTIONARY.

ཀ Ka the first letter of the Tibetan alphabet, corresponding in sound to the Sanskrit क or the English K. Of this letter we read: ཀ་ནི་རྩ་བ་ཤེས་པར་གྲགས ka-ni rtsa-wa shes-par grags (K. g. ཀ 424) "the ka is called the root." As the first letter it has the sense of "the beginning": ཀ་ནས་དག་པ ka-nas dag-pa pure from the beginning. Again, it can signify "power": སྙན་ཚེར་རུང་མ་ཐུ་ཀ་མེད snan htsher-ruń ma-shu ka-med though unpleasant to hear, I have no power not to say it; མ་གནང་ཀ་མེད ma gnań ka-med powerless not to give; མ་འགྲོ་ཀ་མེད ma hgro ka-med powerless not to go, i.e., cannot avoid going. ཀ ka has almost the same sense in ཀ་ཅིས་ཀྱང་མི་ཕན་ཆེ་བ་ལ ka cis kyań mi-phan hchi-wa la (Lo. 35), no resource avails at death. This letter seems to have other metaphorical meanings; thus we read: ཀ་ཤེས་བྱ་བ་འདོད་པ་ཡིན ka shes bya-wa hdod-pa yin (K. g. ཁ 179) "ka, so to be called, is desire."

ཀ I: 1. when used in indicating numbers ka signifies one or first. 2. in modern Tibetan as an affix to many words it denotes: the, all the, the very. སྐབས་ཀ skabs-ka has the same meaning as སྐབས་སུ skabs-su, on a certain occasion; དེ་ཀ de-ka that very; གཉིས་ཀ gñis-ka the two. 3. in a large number of words we find ཀ occurring as the second syllable. In some of these it has been added apparently as a differentiative particle; and in the colloq. we often find it annexed to the older monosyllabic form without explainable reason.

ཀ II: indeed; surely: སླར་ཡང་དྲན་དུ་ཀ་སོང་ slar yań dran-du ka soń (Pag. 42) later again he indeed recollected (the separation).

ཀ ka for; ཀ་བ ka-wa a pillar.

ཀ་ཁ ka-kha 1. the A-B-C, or alphabet. 2. a feather: གསང་སྐད་ལ་ཀ་ཁ་ནི་སྐྱེ་རྨོ hsań-skad la ka-kha ni skyo-ho (K. g. ཀ 216) in the secret language ka-kha signifies a feather.

which this monastery was built is said to have resembled the letter ཀ ka. འབྲི་ཆུའི་འགྲམ་སྒྲོམ་ཐོར་དང་ཉེ་བར་ཀ་ཐོག་ཅེས་པའི་གནས་དགོན། (Deb. ཀ 26) On the bank of the Di-chu (Ḥbri-chu), near Pom-po, is the monastery called Kathog.

ཀ་དག ka-dag = ཀ་ནས་དག་པ ka-naṣ dag-pa pure from the beginning. According to the Ḳñiñ-ma School of Buddhism it means སྟོང་པ་ཉིད ṣtoñ-pa-ñiḍ (çūnyatā) emptiness, or the void; that which is pure from the beginning: རང་བཞིན་ལྷུན་གྱིས་གྲུབ་པའི་འདུས་མ་བྱས་ཏེ། (Yig. 14) that which is not compounded, being evolved of itself, is pure from the beginning.

ཀྱི kyi 1. This syllable is primarily an inflecting affix attached to nouns, adj., participles, &c., indicating the genitive case. This affix takes the form ཀྱི only after the final letters ད, ན, or ས, and is varied to གྱི where the word to which it is attached ends in either ཅ, ས, ར, or ལ, and to གི where the preceding final is ག or ང, or simply to འི if the final happens to be a vowel. Ex.: བོད་ཀྱི of Tibet, Tibetan; ལམ་གྱི of the way; བྱང་གི of the north; འགྲོ་བའི་ཚེ at the time of going. Sometimes, moreover, it is elided altogether, as in བོད་སྐད Tibetan language. 2. It is annexed to verbal roots (with the same variations of form) after the manner of a continuative particle and imparting the gerundial sense, but by some modern writers used as a finite verb. Gerundially it generally implies an antithesis which may be expressed in English by "though" followed by "yet": ཁྱོ་མོས་ཁོ་ལ་བོས་ཀྱི་མཚོ་སྨྱུར་བ་མེད་ལམ་དྲང་བཀྲལ་ཡོད though the girl called to him, yet he went on the straight way without turning his head. As affix to a finite verb it is frequent in the writings of Padma Jungnas and Milaraspa, and is also used in the C. colloquial. Attached to the verbal root it may also carry the sense of

"as much as," "as far as" : ཐམ་འདི་སེམས་ལ་ངེས་ཀྱི་བ་སྣང་གི་རྗེས་སུ་སོང་ as far as he remembered this road, he followed the ox. 3. ཀྱི connecting the auxiliary verb with the verbal root forms a much-used present tense : རྨལ་ཀྱི་ཡོད I am lying down. But here the final vowel does not often take the simple i (ི), e.g., སྐྱི་ཀྱི་འདུག is seeing; still we have in books ཟ་རྒྱུ་འདུག is eating food. [N.B.— The use with the instrumental form ཀྱིས will come under that article.]

With ཡོད yoḍ or འདུག ḥdug it forms a periphrastical present tense: སྨོན་ལམ་འདེབས་ཀྱིན་ཡོད smon-lam ḥdebs-kyin yoḍ he is praying (just now) (Jä.). Most probably the common present form in kyi, gi, &c., is an excised form of this use, e.g., ཡོང་གི་འདུག is coming; སྐྱི་རེད is looking.

Of course the prep. "from" might be omitted here. Again our "because" is often an appropriate opening to clauses terminated in ཀྱིས; ཀྱིས, &c.: འཇོངས་པ་བྱོན་ཀྱིས་ཁོས་བྱོལ་སོང the demon coming, he turned aside; or, because the demon came, he, &c.

There are said to be seven ḍkon or rarities.

དཀོན་མཆོག ḍkon-mchog རཏ་ན any precious object; anything very excellent or best of its kind. The oldest forms of this word are—དཀོནད་ཅོག or དཀོན་ཅོག. དཀོན་མཆོག means དཀོན་གཙེ་མཆོག, the chief of rarities, the rarest being or object, the Supreme Being: སྤྱིར་འཇིག་རྟེན་ན་ནོར་བུ་རིན་ཆེ་ཅེ་ཤེན་ཏུ་རྙེད་དཀའ་ཞིང་དཀོན་པ་ཡིན། དཀོན་པ་དེ་ལས་ཀྱང་ཤིན་ཏུ་དཀོན་པས་ན་དཀོན་གཙེ་མཆོག། "in general in this world a precious jewel difficult to procure is a rarity; that which is much rarer still than any rarity is ḍkon-chog." A precious gem of the rarest kind is useful only for worldly purposes; but Buddha, his church, and creed, are of use to all living beings, both here and hereafter, for increasing and ensuring their happiness. Apart from Buddhism, the Tibetans appear to have possessed the conception of the Supreme Deity in the term Ḍkon-mchog. This term, དཀོན་མཆོག, is used in Tibetan writings for each member of the Buddhist triad—Buddha, Dharma, and Saṅgha—separately, as also for the three collectively; in the latter case often with gsum annexed. Mr. W. W. Rockhill has condemned the use of this word by Christian missionaries to signify "God." But Jäschke has elaborated on the subject as follows:—"Buddhism has always sought the highest good not in anything material, but in the moral sphere, looking with indifference, and indeed with contempt, on everything merely relating to matter. It is not, however, moral perfection, or the happiness attained thereby, which is understood by the 'most precious thing,' but the mediator or mediators who procure that happiness for mankind, viz., Buddha (the originator of the doctrine), the doctrinal scriptures and the corporate body of priests, called ཅིཏཆ, ḍkon-mchog gsum. Now, although this triad cannot, by any means, be placed on a level with the Christian doctrine of a triune God, yet it will be easily understood how the innate desire of man to adore and worship something supernatural, together with the hierarchical tendency of the teaching class, have afterwards contributed to convert the acknowledgment of human activity for the benefit of others (for such it was undoubtedly on the part of the founder himself and his earlier followers) into a devout, and by degrees idolatrous, adoration of these three agents, especially as Buddha's religious doctrine did not at all satisfy the deeper wants of the human mind, and its author himself did not know anything of a God standing apart and above this world. For, whatever in Buddhism is found of beings to whom divine attributes are assigned, has either been transferred from the Indian and other mythologies, and had, accordingly, been current among the people before the introduction of Buddhism, or is the result of philosophical speculation that has remained more or less foreign to the people at large. As, then, the original and etymological signification of the word is no longer current, and as to every Tibetan 'Ḍkon-mchog' suggests the idea of some supernatural power, the existence of which he feels in his heart, and the nature and properties of which he attributes more or less to the three agents mentioned above, we are fully entitled to assign to the word Ḍkon-mchog also the signification of God, though the sublime conception which the Bible connects with the word, viz., that of a personal absolute Omnipotent Being, will only with the spread of the Christian religion be gradually introduced and established."

དཀོན་མཆོག་གྱུན་འདུས ḍkon-mchog kun-ḥdus the three gems, i.e., Buddha, Dharma and Saygha collectively: ཟླ་མ་ནི་དུས་གསུམ་མངས་རྒྱས་ཐམས་ཅད་འདུས་པའི་བདག་ཉིད lama is the essence of all the Buddhas of the three ages massed together; སྐུ་དགེ་འདུན་གསུང་དམ་ཆོས་རྒྱགས་མངས་རྒྱས་ཀྱི་ངོ་བོ་ཉིད་དཀོན་མཆོག་གྱུན་འདུས། the image represents the church; the scriptures represent the heart, i.e., the Dharma; and the holy relics (symbolical of the spirit of Buddha) complete the three gems.

རྐྱེན r̲kyen I: In Buddhist science this important term expresses any co-operating influence which serves to shape and bring about an event as distinguished from རྒྱུ r̲gyu, its direct and obvious cause. In plain language, r̲gyu is the primary cause of anything, but r̲gyu is frequently controlled and modified by a co-ordinate influence known as r̲kyen. As a medical term, according to Jäschke, r̲kyen is differentiated from r̲gyu in that it indicates the pathological or secondary cause of disease, while the latter word denotes its primary or anthropological cause. However, while assigning to r̲kyen the primary meaning of "cause" and "occasion" in the qualified sense of being contributary only to that which comes to pass, we have to note the apparently contradictory signification—effect, occurrence, incident, event. So we meet with རྐྱེན་ཆན་པ r̲kyen-ch̲an-pa unfortunate accident; རྐྱེན་ངན་པས་བདུས he has perished by an evil incident; རྩེ་འདིར་སྡུང་བའི་རྐྱེན་ངན་རྣམས the adversities arising in this life; རང་མི་འདོད་པའི་རྐྱེན an event disagreeable to one's own self; ཐོག་བྱུང་རྐྱེན l̲o-bur r̲kyen a sudden accident; རྐྱེན་དེ་ལ་བརྟེན་ནས r̲kyen de-la b̲r̲ten-nas owing to that circumstance; མེད་པའི་རྐྱེན་ལ་བལྟས་ཏེ med̲-pa̲i r̲kyen-la l̲t̲as̲-te or བརྟེན་ཏེ b̲r̲ten-te considering the case of not being, not having; thus རང་གི་རྐྱེན་དང་འཆི་བའི་རྐྱེན stands also for a cause of disease and of death; བགོལ་རྐྱེན bgol-r̲kyen any circumstance or event adverse to the success of an action, any obstacle, anything opposed or hostile to the existence of another thing: མཐུན་རྐྱེན m̲thun-r̲kyen a happy, favourable circumstance; furtherance; assistance; supply; མཐུན་རྐྱེན་བྱེད་པ m̲thun-r̲kyen byed̲-pa to assist in; to help to; མཐུན་རྐྱེན་འཛོམ་པ m̲thun-r̲kyen h̲dsom-pa altogether successful.

རྐྱེན II: प्रत्यय, प्रहाण In Buddhist metaphysics there are four kinds of རྐྱེན rkyen, viz., (1) རྒྱུའི་རྐྱེན rgyuhi rken हेतुप्रत्यय relation of causality; (2) དེ་མ་thག་པའི་རྐྱེན de-ma-thag pahi rkyen समनन्तर प्रत्यय relation of posteriority; (3) བདག་རྐྱེན bdag-rkyen अधिपतिप्रत्यय relation of subordination or conditionality; (4) དམིགས་རྐྱེན dmigs-rkyen आलम्बनप्रत्यय relation of dependence (as for instance the relation of parts to the whole and vice versâ): རིག་པས་གཟུགས་ཅན་གྱི་རྐྱེན་ཐོབ་ན་བདག་རྐྱེན་གཅིག་ཐོབ་བོས་ཐོང་, གཟུགས་ཅན་གྱིས་རིག་པ་ལ་རྐྱེན་ཐོབ་ན་དམིགས་རྐྱེན་དང་, བདག་རྐྱེན་གཉིས་ཀ་ཚང་དགོས, གཟུགས་ཅན་གྱི་གཟུགས་ཅན་ལ་རྐྱེན་ཐོབ་ན་རྒྱུ་རྐྱེན་དང་བདག་གླེན་གཉིས་ཀས་ཐོབ་དོ. Besides the above four there are two other subdivisions of རྐྱེན rkyen, viz., ཉེ་ལེན upādāna प्रत्यय and ལྷན་གཅིག་ཐོབ sahakārī प्रत्यय (Lon. 16).

The term གང་ཟག gaṅ-zag has sixteen different synonyms:—བདག ḫdag; སྲོག ṣrog; སེམས་ཅན semṣ-can; སྐྱེ་བ ṣkye-wa; གསོ་བ gso-wa; སྐྱེས་བུ ṣkyes-bu; ཅེད་བདག çeḍ-ḫdag; ཅེས་ལས་སྐྱེས çes-las ṣkyes; मानव, मनुज man; བྱེད་པ་པོ byeḍ-pa-po; བྱེད་དུ་ཞུག་པ་པོ byeḍ-du ḫjug-pa-po; ཚོར་བ་པོ tshor-wa-po; ཅེས་པ་པོ çeṣ-pa-po; མཐོན་བ་པོ mthoṅ-wa-po; ཟ་བ་པོ za-wa-po; སློན་པ་པོ ṣloṅ-wa-po (Mñon.). These are all applied to signify an animate being. There are two kinds of གང་ཟག, ordinary and extraordinary; the ordinary གང་ཟག literally means that which is subject to decay, from གང gaṅ, what, and ཟག zag, decay. The Buddhist meaning is as follows:— (1) རང་རྒྱུད་ལྷིག་པ་རྟེན་མོངས་ཀྱིས་གང་ནེ་ཡོན་ཏན་དང་དགེ་བའི་རིགས་གསོག་མི་ཐུབ་པར་ཟག་ཅིང་བསེམས་ཅན་ཕལ་བའི་གང་ཟག raṅ-ṛgyuḍ ṣdig-pa ñon-moṅṣ kyiṣ gaṅ shiṅ yon-tan daṅ ḍge-waḥi rigṣ gsog mi-thub-par zag ḫgro-waṣ semṣ-can phal-waḥi gaṅ-zag one's own nature being filled (གང gaṅ) with sin he cannot acquire and retain virtue, which ཟག zag leaks out or decays, therefore an ordinary living being is called གང་ཟག gaṅ-zag; (2) རང་རྒྱུད་དགེ་བ་དང་བཟང་ཕེའི་ཡོན་ཏན་ཐམས་ཅད་ཀྱིས་གང་ནེ་རྟེན་མོངས་ཀྱི་སྐྱོན་ཐམས་ཅད་ཟག་པས་སངས་རྒྱས་གང་ཟག raṅ-ṛgyuḍ ḍge-wa daṅ ḫzaṅ-poḥi yon-tan thamṣ-caḍ-kyiṣ gaṅ-shiṅ ñon-moṅṣ-kyi ṣkyon thamṣ-caḍ zag ḫgro-waṣ saṅṣ-ṛgyaṣ gaṅ-zag Buddha is གང་ཟག because his nature is full of all virtues or merits and sin has been thrown out of it or has altogether been destroyed; (3) རང་རྒྱུད་ལ་ཡོན་ཏན་ཀྱི་རིགས་གང་བྱང་བ་མེ་རྣམས་པར་ཟྱེད་པ་དང་སྐྱོན་ཀྱི་རིགས་བྱང་བ་རྣམས་ཐབས་ཀྱི་ཟགས་ཤུ་བཅུག་པ་ནི་ཅིག་ཅེག་དམན་ལམ་ཞུགས་པ་གང་ཟག་རྣམས་ས་དེ་ཡང་གྲུབ་མཐའ་བཞི་པ་དང་ཕྱི་བ་འདོད་ཚུལ་ཐབས་པ་རྣམས་ཀྱིས་ཐེག་པ་ཆེན་ཐེག་དམན་ལམ་ཞུགས་པ་གང་ཟག when one's own nature retains whatever virtue it possessed undeteriorated and whatever faults there was in it have been thrown out from exertion, one has entered either the Mahā yánā or Hīnayāna path. Persons in such a stage, whatever doctrine or theory they may hold for salvation, belong indeed of the Mahāyāna. In གང་ཟག gaṅ-zag of the ordinary kind his very nature is གང་ gaṅ, i.e., filled with deeds (laṣ), sin, suffering, and misery; moreover, all virtue and talents having become exhausted, i.e., ཟག zag, his animated being becomes what is called Pudgal. རྟེན་འབྲེལ rten-hbrel is said to be a contraction of རྟེན་པར་འབྲེལ་བར་འགྱུར་བ rten-par hbrel-war hgyur-wa प्रतीत्यसमुत्पाद 1. it is best defined not as causal concatenation but as the inter-dependent causes which have originated matter and all phenomena. These mutually contributory causes, however, according to Buddhist theory, properly centre in or spring forth from avidyā (Tib. མ་རིག་པ) or the ignorant belief that all which seems to us to exist does so exist when it is really non-existent. 2. संयोग omen; circumstances combining to found a judgment or prognostic; diagnosis. Milaraspa says of rten-hbrel: སྔོན་འཁོར་འདས་ཀྱི་རྣམ་རྨངས་མང་རྟེན་འབྲེལ་དུ་གོ་ཞེང་ understanding rten-hbrel to be the whole doctrine of transmigration in general. However, he deviates from the purer philosophy by averring that the co-operating cause at work in rten-hbrel is produced by the deep mysteries of ཐ་མལ and སྣང་བཅ (Mil. ཀ, 89). The doctrine involved in rten-hbrel is fully dealt with in Tsong-khapa's great work, the Lam-rim chen-mo. He sums up the argument thus: འདི་ཀུན་ངོ་བོས་སྟོང་པ་དང་། འདི་ལས་འདི་འབྱུང་བ་ཡི། རེས་པ་གཉིས་པོ་ཡན་ཆད་དུ། གེགས་རྣ་པར་མི་གྱུར་ཅིང་པ། འདི་ལས་ངོ་མཚར་ཕྱར་བ་དང་། འདི་ལས་མད་དུ་ཐུང་བ་གང་། The certitude that all these things are in their very essence void and yet that from the one its fruit the other springs forth, the two uninteruptedly hither or thither mutually assisting each other—what can be more wonderful than this, and what has arisen more stupendous than it!

རྟེན་འབྲེལ་གྱི་འཁོར་ལོ rten-hbrel-gyi hkhor-lo प्रतीत्यसमुत्पाद-चक्र the wheel illustrating the process of the working of successive existences and helpful in meditating on them and in methods for getting rid of their influences, etc. In the tractate རྟེན་འབྲེལ་གྱི་འཁོར་ལོ་མི་ཧྲ་བ་བཅོ་བརྒྱད rten-hbrel gyi-hkhor-lo mi hdra-wa bco-brgyad (A. 35) there are eighteen different descriptions of the wheel illustrating the cycle of Pratītya samutpāda, the earliest one having been designed by Nāgārjuna as contained in Tan. d. ཞོ 32. In it are contained indications of human destiny, luck, happiness and misery, which are drawn up in set formulas. རྟེན་ཅིང་འབྲེལ་བར་འབྱུང་བ་དང་ཐོ་དང་རྣམ་དབྱེ་བསྟན་པའི་མདོ the Sûtra describing the relative existences and the distinctive features contained in them (K. d. ཨ 203). རྟེན་འབྲེལ་ཡན་ལག་བཅུ་གཉིས rten-ḥbrel yan-lag ḅcu gñis the twelve inter-dependent contributories to the orignation of all phenomena. Or, more fully:—The twelve inter-dependent elements which together contribute to the production of all phenomena; the twelve, however, being theoretically not simultaneous in origination but occurring in a certain sequence; each indeed being dependent on its predecessor, though not exactly evolved from it, because by a process of re-action the predecessor is also dependent for manifestation on its successor. Thus, while the succeeding contributories may be said to be evolved in a measure from the preceding ones, there is a mutual dependence which makes all the twelve co-ordinate also. The twelve inter-dependent originations in the Pratītya Samutpāda are:—(1) མ་རིག་པ अविद्या ignorance; (2) འདུ་བྱེད संस्कार association or impressions; (3) རྣམ་ཤེས विज्ञान consciousness; (4) མིང་གཟུགས नामरूप name and form; (5) སྐྱེ་མཆེད skye-mched षड़ायतन the six sense-organs; (6) རེག་པ स्पर्श contact; (7) ཚོར་བ वेदना feeling; (8) sred-pa སྲེད་པ तृष्णा desire or hankering after; (9) ལེན་པ उपादान sensual enthralment; (10) སྲིད་པ sriḍ-pa भव procreation; (11) སྐྱེ་བ skye-wa जाति birth; (12) རྒས་ཤི जरामरण old age and death.

To trouble one's head about a thing is considered a fault much to be guarded against, and the more so, as religious faith as well as meditation require the mind to be strictly free from distraction, and especially in meditation to be concentrated on a single object only: མ་རྟོག་ཏིང་ངེ་འཛིན contemplation without any disturbing reflections.

Thus we can define རྟོགས་པ as: 1. the true perception of all things in general, which leads to the attainment of the སོ་སོ་སྐྱེ་བོ་ས so-so skye-ḥi-sa stage of ordinary perfection. 2. a true metaphysical development leading the way to what is called ཐེག་པ་ཆེན, that is, to Nirvāṇa. Not used in this sense in modern writings.

ཐེག་པ II: यान 1. a method of doctrinal religion and conduct, a vehicle whereby one may be conveyed to higher and higher stages of progress to Buddhistic perfection and so ultimately to Nirvāna. Buddhism is supposed to be divided, primarily and also as a matter of history, into two great methods of observance and spiritual advance, these methods being designated ཐེག་པ (Sans. yāna) or vehicles to carry you onwards. The first or earliest was the ཐེག་པ་དམན་པ otherwise ཐེག་ཆུང the Hīnayāna school or following, now generally estimated as the meanest because the easiest vehicle to go by. This school may be taken to have been now long since extinct. The second and later development, said to have been first authoritatively promulgated by Kanishka at the council of Kusāna in Kashmir (about A.D. 78), is designated the ཐེག་པ་ཆེན་པོ theg-pa chen-po or Great Vehicle, otherwise the Mahāyāna school. A leading feature in this system was the introduction of the series of Bodhisattwas (བྱང་ཆུབ་སེམས་དཔའ), and eventually of Dhyāni Buddhas (ཡེ་ཤེས་སངས་རྒྱས) and Dhyāni Bodhisattwas (ཡེ་ཤེས་སེམས་དཔའ), into the curriculum of progress. As the Bodhisattwas are beings who have voluntarily and indefinitely delayed their own absorption into Nirvāna for the sake of helping forward others on the ཐར་པའི་ལམ or path of deliverance, so much the greater and more noble and beneficent is a system deemed which has included such principles as part of itself than that of the Hīnayāna or Lesser Vehicle which is destitute of the idea. The Mahāyāna in all other respects, likewise, is a more elaborate and intricate method of advance and therefore is, Buddhistically, considered the higher and better; while the Hīnayāna is held to be as crude and unsophisticated as it is frankly selfish. Historically, the Lesser or Lower Vehicle may be taken as the primitive curriculum of Doctrine and Practice as taught in the early period in Magadha and transported thence into Ceylon and even to Kambodia. Nevertheless, Trans-Himalayan Buddhism, as propagated from North India into Tibet China, and Japan, has never known any other form than the Mahāyāna. Indeed all records of the prevalence of ཐེག་དམན་ or Hīnayāna are so vague that theories invalidating its existence altogether as a practised sphere of Buddhism have been propounded. One theory allows to it only a paper existence set forth to contrast the greater glory of the Mahāyāna system, in the works of which system alone all first references to it occur. Another theory lately expounded by Professor Satis Chandra Acharya of Calcutta (See Journal Royal Asiatic Soc., Jan. 1900) endeavours to classify Brahmanism and Jainism with the doctrine of heretical Buddhists as together comprising the Hīnayāna system as referred to in Mahāyāna writings; and it is urged that Buddhist authors would naturally speak scornfully of the Brahmanism, etc., which had gone before as being a Hīnayāna, a less or lower means of conveyance to salvation. However, Professor C. Bendall, in a note on the last proposition, points to the matter-of-fact reference of the Chinese pilgrim Hiuen Tsang to the two systems as being both of them schools of solely Buddhist practice prevalent in his own day in the countries he visited, describing in particular some of the Ceylon Buddhists as of "the Little Vehicle." We may add, moreover, that ཉན་ཐོས the well-known term for a Buddhist hearer or Sr'āvaka is always defined in the Mṅon-brjod and other similar Tibetan treatises as a ཐེག་ཆུང་ངུས་བྱ་བ or ཐེག་ཆུང་རྣམ་རྟོག, that is, a follower of the Hīnayana school. 2. the word seems to have a second or more general technical meaning, signifying: doctrine in overt action, the practice of any doctrine, whether particular or part of a system or the whole system itself; also conduct.

ཐེག་པ་གསུམ theg-pa gsum the Three Vehicles. Although the great primary division of Buddhism is ordinarily set forth as only two-fold, the trinitarian tendency arises here, as elsewhere, and we read, therefore, of a set of three doctrinal vehicles also. These are:—(1) ཐེག་དམན་ or ཉན་ཐོས་ཀྱི་ཐེག་པ Hinayāna or Çrāvaka yāna; (2) རང་སངས་རྒྱས་ or རང་རྒྱལ་གྱི་ཐེག་པ Pratyeka Buddha yána or Pradeçika yāna; (3) བྱང་ཆུབ་སེམས་དཔའི་ཐེག་པ or ཐེག་པ་རེ་དོ the Bodhisattva yāna or Mahāyāna or Ekayāna, "སེམས་ཅན་ཐམས་ཅད་ཀྱི་དོན་གྱི་ཕྱིར་ཇོ་གས་པའི་བྱང་ཆུབ་སེམས་བསྐྱེད་པའི་ཕྱིར for the good of all sentient beings so that they may imbibe faith in the doctrine of the all-perfect Buddhahood." Again, the Mahāyāna school has been further divided into departments which under Tantrik influence, have assumed the position of independent and even superseding systems, deemed preferable to the generating source from which they took origin. The principal derivative of Mahāyāna origin is the Mantra yāna (སྔགས་ཀྱི་ཐེག་པ) or Vajrayāna (རྡོ་རྗེ་ཐེག་པ) which follows mysticism and deals in a measure with esoteric Buddhism. The Mantra-yāna is divided into two classes called རྒྱུའི་ཐེག་པ (Hetu-yāna) vehicle of Cause and འབྲས་བུའི་ཐེག་པ (Phala-yāna) the vehicle of Effect. Acc. to the Bon and also the Rdsogs-chen-pa sect of the Ñiṅ-ma school there are nine vehicles (ཐེག་པ་དགུ). Of these བཞི་རྒྱུའི་ཐེག་པ are the four subdivisions of the doctrine of Cause:—

ཐུག་ཐེག་པ, ངེ་ཐེག་པ, ནམ་ཐེག་པ, འཕྲལ་ཐེག་པ; while བཞི་འབྲས་བུའི་ཐེག་པ=four subdivisions of the doctrine of Effect:—དགེ་ཐེག་པ, རྣང་ཐེག་པ, ཚ་ཐེག་པ, ཨ་ཐེག་པ; and lastly is རྒྱ་རྣལ་འབྱོར་ཐེག་པ अनुत्तरयान which is common to both the series just mentioned.

དང་ I: daṅ is a peculiarly-used word taking the form and position of a conjunction but really being a postp. or commitative case-sign of the meaning "with ཅ." Thus ཕྱུག་དང་ར་མི་དང་མཛེ་ is not properly "sheep and she-goats and yak," but "yak with she-goats with sheep." However, in such enumerations, the rendering "and" is legitimate, as well as in mere couplings, e.g., སྐྲ་དང་ཙམྤ་འབིག་པ shaving the hair and moustache. Acc. to Thon-mi-Sambhoṭa, the father of Tibetan literature, this word has the following five significations:—(1) ཚིག་རྩ་ཕྱི་ཐུགས་གཅིག་ཏུ་སྦྱར་པ as a conj. for connecting a word with another following it. (2) སོ་སོར་འབྱེད་པ as an analytic term to separate one word from another:—དབང་པོ་རྣམས་ནི་མིག་དང་རྣ་བ་དང་སྣ་དང་ཁྲེ་དང་ལུས་སོ the Dwaṅ-po or the organs of sense are the eye and ear and nose and tongue and the body. (3) རྒྱུ་མཚན་ཏེ་རྒྱུ་མཚན་ཉིད་ཀྱི་དོན because of, on account of, by reason of: སྨན་ཟོས་པ་དང་ནད་སོས་སོ because of having taken medicine the disease was cured; ཆོས་མང་དུ་ཐོས་པ་དང་ལྡན་པའི་འཕེད་འཛིན་ཐོ on account of hearing many religious discourses his perceptive faculty increased; དུ་བ་མཐོང་བ་དང་མེར་ཤེས་སོ by seeing smoke he could know (there was) fire. (4) དུས་བརྗེད་པ་ཙམ་སྐབས་ཀྱི་དོན when, as soon as, occasion, opportunity: རྒྱུ་སྐར་རྒྱལ་འཛར་བ་དང་ཡུལ་དུ་ཚས་སོ he proceeded to the country when the constellation Pusyā appeared; ཉི་མ་ལོ་ཤར་བ་དང་ཆོས་རྫོགས་དང་as soon as the sun rose on the mountain-pass he performed the religious service. (5) གད་མཁ་ངག་བརྗོད་པའི་དོན་ལ་འཇུག་གོ it is used to signify exhortation, advice or entreaty: ལེགས་པར་སློབ་དང་ do learn well; ཀ་རྩོམ་ཀྱིས་དང་ and read loudly (Situ.). This last usage, namely, the annexation of daṅ to the imperative, has become common with certain verbs in the colloq. being then used almost as a sign of the imperative. Thus ཐོས་དང་ "toi tang" look, see! ཟོ་ཟས་དང་ eat food. That "with" is the general signification is evident from many phraseological usages of daṅ:—in using མཉམ་དུ "in equality, on a level," daṅ connects that word with the consequent, e.g., ཁོ་དང་ཁྱོད་དང་མཉམ་དུ་འགྲོ་དགོས he must go with you;

so with the formative ལྡན་པ l̥dan-pa signifying "possessed of," "provided with," e.g., རྩོད་དང་ལྡན་པ provided with wealth, wealthy; ཀུ་ཕུ་དང་ལྡན་པའི་རྒྱལ་པོ a king possessed of (or with) five sons. More explicitly in its true sense does it occur with many verbs:—མི་སེར་དང་འཕྲད་པ to meet with the husbandman; རག་པ་དང་རྒག་པ to fall in with robbers; རྒྱལ་པོའི་སྐུ་དང་མཇལ་བ to salute the king's person; གཞན་གྱི་ཡིད་དང་མཐུན་པ to agree with another's opinion; ཐམས་ཅད་དང་གྲབས་མཐུན་པ to be in harmony with all; ས་བདག་དང་འགལ་བ to be in opposition to or with the local god; དགྲ་དང་འཁབ་བ to fight with an enemy; ཁ་རླབས་དང་འཁབ་པ to struggle with a snow-storm; སྒྲ་རྙོད་ལྷོ་ལ་བྱ་མ་དང་རྩོད་པ་བྱས made dispute with the lama about the prayer-wheel; ཡ་མཚན་ལ་གྲུབ་ཐོབ་དང་འགྲན་པ to contend in miracles with the saint; དྲུ་མེད་དང་ཉལ་བ to lie with a woman; གོང་ཁྲོད་དང་ཉེ་བ near the town; རྟེ་དང་འདྲ་བ equal to that. Some particular ways of using དང་ dañ are the following:—གསེར་དང་དངུལ་དང་ལྕགས་ལ་སོགས་པ gold, and silver, and iron, and the other (metals); whence note that in enumerations དང་ is employed in different ways, arbitrarily, e.g., after every single noun or pronoun except the last one, or also after the last; it is used or omitted just as the metre may require it; or when a sum is mentioned, in the following manner:—འབྱུང་བ་བཞི་ཡི the four elements; ས་དང་ཆུ་དང་མེ་དང་རླུང་དང་བཞི་པོ sa-dañ chu-dañ me-dañ r̥luñ-dañ b̥shiho earth, and water, and fire, and air, or esp. in col. language, thus ས་དང་གཅིག, ཆུ་དང་གཉིས, etc.—དང་ is frequent also in the sense of "from," especially with certain verbs which cannot indeed be used apart from it. Of these are འབྱལ་བ to be separated དང་ from, e. g., འདོད་ཆགས་དང་བྱལ་ཡིན was separated from lust; also འཕྲལ་བ h̥phral-wa to divide དང་ from; again: ཁང་པ་དང་རིང་བ far from the house. In general, however, ལས or ནས is the sign of "from." A further employment of དང་ very habitual in the classical treatises is in the manner of a continuative particle at the end of subordinate and co-ordinate sentences; so it is annexed to the verbal participle which concludes the clause, but never in the older works to the root of a verb standing thus; it can often, of course, be rendered by "and" as if it belonged to the following clause, but not always so. One example of this very common usage will here suffice: དེའི་ཚེ་ན་སྦྲལ་གྱིས་ཁྱིམ་བདག་དེ་དང་ངར་ཐེབ་པ་དང་། མི་དེ་དང་ལྷན་གཅིག་ཏུ་ཁྱེའུ་གཉིས་སྐད་བརེན་མས་ཏེ་བྱོས་སོང་ thereupon the snake terrifying the householder, two boys together with that man, throwing up cries, escaped. Finally, the one conclusion derivable from the various usages of དང་ is that the word must be always technically regarded as belonging to the words or clause which may precede it and not to any word or clause subsequent; which thus negatives the notion that it is a true conjunction.
